He was responding to a letter by former Georgia House Speaker Tom Murphy (R-Peachtree Corners) in which Murphy had argued that Maynard Jackson, Atlanta's first black mayor, had received a sweetheart deal when the city of Atlanta bought his peanut processing plant. The open letter was reprinted in the Business Journal, but in case you can't read it there, here it is: Dear Georgia Business Executive: If the real "deal" that forced Mayor Jackson to sell his half of the big Peanut Corporation was the inflated price given to the city, then I submit to you that he was simply being a smart businessman, who understood that the real value of his property was realized when he could command a price higher than his competition — who believed they could not afford to pay the same amount the city was willing to 3e33713323
