2014 Epson RX580 manual, Python IDE for Windows, Access Media Player 13 Keygen for Mac, Trend Micro Policy Center . Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton gave a testy interview Monday to NBC News' Matt Lauer on the TODAY show. She was irritated by questions about her honesty and her readiness to serve as commander in chief. The question of her health had been on the minds of voters throughout the campaign. "I want to make sure that the American people have confidence in our government, and in our president," Clinton said. "And, you know, the standards are, are so high that we can't even get into that." Clinton said she was, "amazingly healthy," but wouldn't comment on whether she had pneumonia. "And I wish people would respect the fact that I've been on the campaign trail now for five months and four days, and on every occasion, including today, have felt great," she said. "But I'm not going to go there," she added. Lauer asked if she had anything to say to the people who are questioning her health or "reading meaning into" it. "No, I just think it's absurd, and I think it's frustrating, and I want them to leave me and my family alone," she said. Later in the interview, she said she has to be "very careful" of the public's perception. "I just don't think I should be any different than all of my predecessors who have been out there in foreign capitals doing this kind of thing for a long time," she said. Despite the tart exchange, Clinton said she looked forward to discussing foreign policy and military matters with President-elect Donald Trump. "I don't want to second-guess his transition, but I want to be sure that we are really making good decisions about defense and foreign policy. I just want to be absolutely sure that we have the facts." When Lauer asked why she did not just release her medical records, as Trump has asked, Clinton declined. "We are not going to put out an email from my doctor. I'm happy to share with the public domain what I've said and what I've done for my entire life. I want it to be about my record, what I've done for our country. If people want to know more about me, they can look at my books, my paid speeches
