Warring States, or Wu-Shih, is a tactical Chinese board game (武氏戰國志). It was developed by the same folks who produced Clans: Hero Edition, Wiz-Board and Mountain Empires. The name of the game combines the Chinese words 'Wu' (King) and 'Shih' (to rule or to command). It is a tactical wargame in which you play the role of king of one of the five clans. In warring states, your goal is to defeat the opponent by occupying all of your opponent's cities on the board. To do this, you take turns placing troops on each other's cities, armies in the river valley and bordering cities, and your own cities with your soldiers to score victory points. A game lasts about 1-3 hours and consists of up to 8 players. The game board has 15 (3x5) hexagonal maps and 256 cities - enough for 16 players. Warring States (Host Edition) [Updated-2022]

Warring States is a mod for Civilization IV that recreates the Warring States period of ancient China. The mod contains new historical information and units. Take part in the Tang and Song Dynasty conflicts with the same units that China fielded at the time. The game is split into two parts: the Historical Campaign and Politics. The Historical Campaign: The Warring States period of ancient China lasts around 400 years, from the end of the Qin Empire to the advent of the Han Dynasty. It is a time of war, but more than that: it is a time of forming new Chinese cultures, empires, and military. The History: China is divided into two powerful factions, the Han and the Zhao. Each has their advantages and disadvantages. While the Han control the Yellow River, the Zhao control the Yangtze River. The Tang Dynasty, a new faction, was formed from the merging of the Jin and the Tang Empires. Its capital is at Chang'an, modern day Xi'an. The Tang have a dominant culture which they believe to be superior to that of the Han. The best soldiers, the best hackers, and the best generals fight for the Tang. They have the empire completely under their control and are the leading faction. The expansion of the Tang Empire has brought them into many small kingdoms that are now under their rule. Some of these kingdoms are well connected in the world market, and have become powerful nations. The state of Wei is the main and oldest state in the world, while the state of Wu is the most advanced state. Many things have changed and improved, but these two powers still have a lot in common. The Politics: Two main power players on the world stage, we see them clash in the modern times. Leaders on both sides can make great deals and decision with their enemies. Tribe Details The Attitudes of Each Tribe will be displayed clearly so that players can easily understand the differences Players can capture any city and bind the city with a fortress with an attack rating over 3 If a player runs away from a siege, the fort will be destroyed and the military science of that city will be lost forever One player can play a command role in the online map by using a command post Characters that are strong are able to capture the city of their enemies The different strategies between the east and west, that will result in success and failure The eastern region of China: East China(Shandong) Description: ⬚ d41b202975
