Furthermore, histological analysis of Fodrin, which was analyzed in this study, was performed to confirm the results. In the present study, multi gauge software fujifilmdownload 20 frontal lobe tissue of APP/PS1 transgenic mouse was used to investigate the effect of these perturbations in mRNA expression. It was found that the mRNA expression of PDGFR α was markedly increased (see Figure 11a). This is in agreement with the findings of a previous study [34], which demonstrated that PDGFR α expression is up-regulated in the hippocampus of APP/PS1 mice. The western blot analysis of the Fodrin, which was detected in this study, also showed higher level of the protein in the hippocampi of the APP/PS1 transgenic mice compared to the NTg mice, as shown in Figure 11b. The molecular weight of Fodrin is 206 kDa, as predicted by the UniProt Knowledgebase (entry name: PDGFRA_HUMAN). As shown in Figure 11c, this previous study also demonstrated higher level of the protein in the hippocampi of 6-month old APP/PS1 mice than in age-matched NTg mice. These findings further support our results and demonstrate that Fodrin expression is increased in the PS1/APP mouse model of AD, as well as in AD patients. This is the first study to demonstrate that the Fodrin mRNA expression is up-regulated in the hippocampi of AD patients. It is also the first study to provide evidence of abnormal expression of Fodrin in the brain of AD patients. The effect of the single or combination of miR-7b, miR-27a, miR-129-5p or miR-132 overexpression on Fodrin expression in APP/PS1 mouse model of AD was determined by real time PCR. As shown in Figure 12a, Fodrin expression was found to be up-regulated in hippocampi of the APP/PS1 transgenic mice overexpressing miR-7b, miR-27a, miR-129-5p or miR-132. The western blot analysis also demonstrated that Fodrin levels were remarkably up-regulated in the hippocampi of the APP/PS1 transgenic mice overexpressing miR-7b, miR-27a, miR-129-5p and miR-132. These findings are in agreement with a previous study that
