Pseudoneuropathia is a rare differential diagnosis in patients with subcutaneous nodules in the scalp or perifollicular skin, without actual neurologic symptoms. We describe a patient who presented with multiple subcutaneous nodules in the scalp, without a clear etiology or any clinical manifestations of neurological disease. A biopsy of a nodule in the right forehead revealed a non-caseating granuloma. The clinical symptoms subsided. The patient received corticosteroid treatment without a relapse. This case shows that sebaceous nevus of the scalp can be associated with or even mimic pseudoneuropathia, and should be part of the differential diagnosis in these cases.Summer Ahead Cajun Pork & Shrimp Boil August 11, 2015 2 minute read We have been sitting around at the past three weeks awaiting the smell of the weekend. It never comes, but there is always next week. That said, I do love the arrival of the Fourth of July. Not only does it give me the urge to celebrate with BBQ, but it also gives me the urge to make Cajun food. First of all, after a year of living in Louisiana, I am becoming a bit of a Cajun. I grew up with Cajun food, but I always thought that it was the same food made in different houses, as the food could be simple and the condiments were so important. Not only is that not true, but in this case, it is also the most important part of the meal. The food is simply delicious, but the Cajun flavors (like the blackening spices) can vary greatly, and the condiments are what drive the taste. The main inspiration
