January 18, 2010 A quick weekend update. It was a productive weekend, but not without a few interesting and frustrating moments. Saturday morning I woke up only to discover that I was having a terrible case of food poisoning. After several visits to the bathroom, I managed to dress and go to church. I arrived feeling somewhat better, but still had the woozy feeling that comes with lying in bed with bad food poisoning for hours. I headed back home and I was struck by a panicked feeling that I would not be able to find time to write. I have not had a day like this since July. I have always been able to find time to write even when the kids were sick, but I just couldn't do it this time. I ended up calling the kids at around 10 pm, and while they did not feel bad they sounded miserable and lonely as they missed each other. I also had the kids' school mid-terms on Sunday so I had more than one thing to do. I kept looking at the clock and wishing that I would have checked my email sooner, so I could have either replied to the people who emailed me on Friday or emailed myself on Friday night. Fortunately I was able to get back on track after sending the children home. Sunday I spent time at church and then went home to get ready for my mid-term team reunion which was hosted by our state rep for the first time this year. It was really fun to see old friends, meet some new ones and get a nice, relaxed Sunday afternoon to myself. Since I was also cooking for a lot of people the recipe I made for our appetizer was especially successful. I had promised the kids I would make their favorite pot of stew so I boiled my kidney beans, made a quick and tasty salsa, and popped some corn. The kids loved it all and wanted seconds, but that meant I had to keep cooking 6d1f23a050
