the disk diffusion method [25] was used for the preliminary antibacterial evaluation of 1-pyridylimidazo[1,5-a]pyridine derivatives. the mic50 of these derivatives, showing inhibition in the preliminary tests, were further determined by the microtitre plate technique using micro dilution method [26]. in brief, the bacterial strains (s. aureus, p. vulgaris, group d streptococci, bacillus sp., e. coli, p. aeruginosa and s. morganii) were grown and diluted to 2105 colony-forming units (cfu)/ml in sodium phosphate buffer (spb) containing 0.03% luriabertani (lb) broth. the synthesized derivatives were dissolved in dmso and their serial dilution was performed in 50 l of lb medium in 96-well microtitre plate to achieve the required concentrations (0.110 g/ml) with bacterial inoculums (5104 cfu per well). dmso was taken as negative control and ceftriaxone and clotrimazole were taken as positive control. after incubation at 37c overnight, the mics were taken as the lowest inhibitor concentration at which the bacterial growth was inhibited. the average of three values was calculated and that was the mic for the test material and bacterial strain. in order to reactivate the chemdraw program, click on on activate over the internet to full the activation. click activate on the assist menu after that put in your serial number (it displays up instantly if you initially activated on the exact same device). click on activate over the internet to full the activation. the software will screen a caution information one 30 days before the prior expiration time, and you can near that window after that click activate on the assist menu. if your software has already ended, you will become immediately prompted to trigger when you start chemdraw. if you are using older versions of chemoffice, you may either upgrade to the brand-new edition, or may keep using your older version by reactivating with your existing serial number.
