a recovery code is a randomly generated 28-character code that you can use to help reset your apple id. once you create it, you will be prompted to sign in to your apple id using your username and password. your recovery code is a completely different password than your apple id password and cannot be used to reset or change your apple id password. if youre planning on buying a new device, it is important to keep in mind that you must have your imei to be able to unlock the handset. this is a fifteen digit number that is found on the back of a mobile phone. it provides a unique id for each mobile phone. it is a number that is assigned to you by your network operator. the unlocking tool aims to make the process of unlocking simple and straightforward. with an extremely intuitive user interface, you can select the right option to unlock your handset and complete the process within a few clicks of the mouse. once unlocked, the sim card can be used to make calls to another network. find your imei on the back of the handset and then select the option that says "unlock this phone", when prompted, and proceed. you will be prompted to enter your imei. using the imei number, the tool will then proceed to unlock the handset. once the handset is unlocked, you can insert the sim card into another handset to use the phone with another network. we have to make a caveat that has become a bit of a mantra: the unlocking tool does not work for all phones. even though it does not provide a technical basis for unlocking, there is a very good chance that the imei of your phone will not be accepted. this is because, for example, phones with custom roms, custom kernel and bad imei will simply fail to unlock. in general, you will have to buy a sim that is not locked by your current network and insert it into the handset.
