most payment companies are. some even have the impact that the rest of the industry wants to have: we made it easier for consumers to make payments. but in doing so, weve spent decades helping banks make payments easier as well. bump helps businesses in a variety of industries, each of which provides a way for consumers to pay. today, its not just consumers who are more than willing to pay. at the end of the day, we take on every industry. whether it be for a car company, a developer, or an organization thats running around the world, bump wants to provide a solution that is easy for them, because we know theres always going to be opportunities. we work with your business to build a scalable solution that doesnt come with high costs. at bump, as the payment network grows, we are able to scale down our costs. in fact, we were part of the team that launched its first business, stripe, which was the first payments platform to provide a turnkey solution to accepting payments. one of the most interesting things about bump is that we completely changed the model of the payment provider, and weve been with the industry since then. it wasnt until 2015, when we applied this new mindset of simplicity, that we started to acquire more than 50% of the market share in payments within a few short years. in 2016, the entire industry was keen to figure out how to scale. we were the team that went around educating the market and explaining that a payments network couldnt be about payments. it had to be so much more. bump has more than 250 employees, and we aim for at least 500 employees by year end. i still love the responsibility of leading a team, and with that responsibility comes a sense of responsibility in everything i do, and thats not something that i want to cede to anyone else. as our core values, at the top of our list is the aim of this chapter is to help you fully communicate as if you were writing in an academic essay. within each chapter, there are multiple versions of the paper that you can view, download, and compare. the first version is the rough draft, which can be saved and rewritten based on the feedback you receive on the first copy of the paper. once you are satisfied with this draft, you will have the option to save it as a powerpoint slide show or a pdf to easily browse and refer back to the points that need more refining. thus, during the high school writing process, you will collect sources and your own content, edit and refine the sources to tailor them to your course assignment, and develop a clear thesis statement. you will revise and edit your sources, compare them with your classmates, then revise them, and propose your own unique questions that you want to explore and answer in the assignment. note that the syllabus is simply an outline of the course syllabus, including class and office hours, important dates and resources, and homework and exams. it helps you get through the day, week, and semester. use it as your memory. the term paper is the required assignment, which is the primary source that is evaluated by the professor. however, there are specific expectations for the length of the assignment. the term paper should be a page long, but there is no set time frame. the most important factor is that the term paper is due and must be turned in by the due date. you can also use the due date checker extension at www.thesisgenie.com to automatically generate alerts regarding submission deadlines. 5ec8ef588b
