There is a lot of artistry involved in running a website. And, there's a lot of traffic that comes to your website. If you didn't know that, you should read the articles from Pro Blogger about how to gain traffic to your website and about making money from blogging. It's a good idea to know that. Understanding the toolset for running a successful website is a good idea. But, what about the little things, like making Google Analytics work for you? Today, I'm going to tell you a story about how I built a website without a CMS. I did everything that I do with WordPress, except for starting with the newest version of WordPress. Imagine for a second that you have a blog that you're really proud of. A blog that your friends and family really admire, and you're making money from it. Then you get a call from your boss asking you to make changes to your website because it has so many visitors, and it's basically crawling the interwebs. You're worried that someone you care about might read your blog and find out that you're using JavaScript. So, you re-write it so that it's compatible with older browsers. For your own convenience, you'll also include a link in that browser that will allow you to visit your website. Because you're still making money from your blog, you've got lots of time to make the changes that you need to make. It only takes a few days for those edits to go live. 5ec8ef588b
