I appreciated the new Windows 10 operating system's improved touch interface, which is a welcome change. We shouldn't be surprised by Apple offering Touch ID on its own devices, but I don't hesitate to use Windows 10. The Surface Pro included a fingerprint scanner on its cover, and I can't recommend it enough. By the way, I'd advise against buying Windows 10 from the Microsoft Store as it resulted in errors that resulted in system crashes. The biggest hurdles I encountered while I was using the HP Stream 11 (aka Chromebook Pixel e-reader) were on the software side. First, the OS requires Java or Microsoft Silverlight to function, and the programs are not available on the Web. Also, the operating system is unstable even with optional updates. I tried downloading the native Linux versions of Lightroom and Photoshop, but they didn't seem to work at all. That means users have to plan ahead and know that they don't have access to custom software. Out of this entire category of notebooks, Windows is the only one that can be upgraded. An interesting notion is that Adobe could adapt its Creative Suite 6 for Windows 8.1 in order to provide a Windows-like environment for software developers who do not want to build their own Windows desktop applications. Finally, so far, I found Lightroom's and Photoshop's interfaces very difficult to learn to use. Many menus are included that make more sense when you first delve into the software (File, Develop, Edit, History and many more).

With the recent release, we now have the ability to import and export images to Apple's OpenType font, which is quite a feat, considering the fact that they're natively supported by all other platforms. With the new SDK, Android and iOS developers can create apps that feature all the photo and video capabilities that Photoshop has to offer. With the new SDK, developers can use the Adobe Creative SDK to develop plugins to integrate Photoshop into their mobile and web apps. The SDK will be available on Build 2017. Adobe is working with both Apple and Google to ensure that its Photoshop CC mobile and web apps remain updated, to ensure that the software is always on the cutting edge of what's new and in the market. The beta of the new features in Photoshop relies on the Adobe Sensei AI technology. This neural network requires only "a few minutes of training" to confirm the accuracy of any image edits, and then users can apply the filters for even better results. Photoshop CC users can enjoy seeing their images come to life on iPhone and Android devices, and on Android tablets through the Adobe Sensei app. Adobe's digital imaging platform also includes a One-Click Unlearning Tool that does a one-time job by removing unwanted objects and replacing them with the focus area. Selections can be made via the technology's intelligent tools, which allows the user to "batch" a number of images with the same changes in one action.

Image edits can also be as simple or as complex as the user chooses, and content updates can be made in one click for the best photo results.

The scaling path guide is activated by pressing the "i" key on the keyboard, expressively enhancing their ability to move a shape and resize it at the same time. It highlights the shape's center and guides them on the shortest and the longest paths to the desired spacing. The new feature helps users to scale objects and backgrounds for greater precision and accuracy. The new Puppet Warp tool is one of the best features we've seen from Adobe in a long time. It's a fun way to stylize changes to images without wrecking their core integrity. It has a behavioral algorithm for fine tuning, which works even on subtle distortions. Puppet Warp supports right-to-left alignment, and also lets you apply transformations and effects to a shape's bounding box, making it easy for users to take care of images without a hitch while building infographics, web pages and mobile applications in Adobe XD. One of the major features for 2020 is the new Content-Aware Move tool. It's designed to make your work flow easier and faster. First, you click and drag on an area of content you want to move. Then, threshold the color in that area by clicking the button above the preview area. Next, drag the content onto another location. While we will miss Glamour Glow, the introduction of a new tool allows users to automatically generate a tonal gradient based on another area of the image and shape it to enhance it. Simply click Merge & Embed gradient into cropped area, and choose your desired colour or colour gradient.
